LeMond back-pedals on Armstrong quotes

Greg LeMond says his post-lour de France criticism of Lance Armstrong was taken out of context.

LeMond the first U.S. winner of the Tour, shocked cycling fans when he cast doubt on the integrity of Armstrong's third consecutive victory, telling the Sunday Times of London he was "devastated" that Armstrong had associated with physician Michele Ferrari, who is awaiting trial in Italy for providing performance-enhancing drugs to attiletes.
"I would have all the praise in the world for Lance if I thought he was clean," LeMond told Sports Illustrated. "But until Dr. Ferrari's trial, we can't know for ours!

The Sunday Times also quoted Le-Mond as saying, "In a general sense, if Lance is clean, it is the greatest comeback in the history of sport. If he isn't, it would be the greatest fraud."

Before this year's Tour, Armstrong said he and his coaches consulted with Ferrari about high-altitude training techniques, Ferrari's area of expertise.

in a statement released Tuesday, LeMond said, "I sincerely regret that some of my remarks were taken out of context and seemed to question the veracity of Lance's performances.

LeMond: Now

backs Armstrong.

For the record, I want to be clear that I believe Lance to be a great champion and I do not believe, in any way, that he has ever used any performance-enhancing substances. I believe his performances are the result of the same hard work, dedication and focus that were mine 10 years ago,"

After being read LeMond's latest comments, Armstrong told USA TODAY. "It is nice to hear there was a clarification. I've always had a lot of respect for Greg as a rider and for what he's done for our sport. I respect and appreciate him even more for going out of his way to say that. I didn't have hard feelings before he made the statement and don't have them now."

Armstrong said he didn't think LeMond was pressured to make the statement by Trek Bicycles, which makes LeMond's self-named bike and is a major sponsor of Armstrong and the U.S. Postal Service cycling team.

The Times' London offices were closed when the statement was issued. A Sports Illustrated spokesman said, "We stand by our quotes, and we stand by our story."
